

You decided to work with others who bring different brainstorming ideas to the table (+2 points)	You gain a lot of internet support about your idea on your webpage which helps to advertise your product (+2 points)	The money from your supporters on Kickstarter allowed you to plan out a better prototype (+2 points)	You decided to join a like-minded business partner and thus, cut your expenses in half (+2 points)	Your business partner has a relative who is works for a manufacturing company and is able to give you a discount on creating your prototype (+2 points)
Your pitch to your boss was stronger because you gave it with others on your team rather than alone (+2 points)	An investor loves your pitch and backs your product (+2 points)	You got more money than expected from an investor and are able to make more products to sell (+2 points)	Customers are giving very good reviews on your website (+2 points)	Your company's product that you helped work on has been a huge success and your boss is pleased with your hardwork and dedication (+2 points)

You decide to work with a partner who ends up developing the idea for themselves (-2 points)	Your boss chooses your coworkers idea over yours (-2 points)	Your business partner chooses cheaper materials without running it by you first and now your prototype is of low quality (-2 points)	You cannot seem to agree on how to make your prototype and thus, you're sacrificing the schedule you were trying to follow (-2 points)	You and your business partner cannot agree on investment terms (-2 points)
Your prototype breaks during your pitch to the investors (-2 points)	You and your coworker were able to complete your prototype for your boss before the deadline (+2 points)	Your business partner does not work with customers well and is giving your company a bad reputation (-2 points)	You're making less money than expected because you have to split profits with your partner(-2 points)	Your sales are dropping because competitors are leaving you poor reviews online (-2 points)